

The Blackstone Legal Fellowship

The Blackstone Legal Fellowship, a leadership program of Alliance Defending Freedom (and global partner ADF International), prepares, cultivates, and launches Christian law students for careers marked by integrity and excellence. To date, we have trained nearly 2,000 law students from more than 25 countries.

World-Class Training

The Blackstone Legal Fellowship summer program includes:

Phase I: Two weeks of intensive training sessions, led by prominent Christian legal, philosophical, and theological scholars.

Phase II: Six-week legal internships at prestigious law firms, NGOs, universities, and government offices, among others.

Phase III: One week of professional development training sessions, led by lawyers and scholars at the pinnacle of the legal profession.

Long-Term Strategy

Blackstone is a multi-faceted community, not a one-dimensional conference. It is purposefully designed to mark the beginning of a lifelong professional relationship that equips Fellows to effectively engage the legal culture and accelerate their careers. Blackstone has a dedicated Alliance Relations team to specifically serve these purposes.

Accordingly, the end of Phase III is not a culmination, it is a beginning. This is one of the unique aspects of the Fellowship. All Interns who successfully complete the summer program are invited to apply to be commissioned as Blackstone Fellows. Those selected will carry this professional distinction, and the professional network that accompanies it, throughout their careers.

Blackstone Fellows have gone on to practice law in prominent law firms, public interest and policy organizations, think tanks, academia, international institutions, and numerous government positions.

“Unlike any other experience, Blackstone has envisioned and equipped me to pursue my career with purpose.”
